Iraqis Urged to Take Up Arms

Weekend death toll prompts calls for civilian self-defense

BAGHDAD | Prominent Shiite and Sunni politicians called on Iraqi civilians to take up arms to defend themselves after a weekend of violence that claimed more than 220 lives, including 60 who died Sunday in a surge of bombings and shootings around Baghdad.

The calls reflect growing frustration with the inability of Iraqi security forces to prevent extremist attacks.

Sunday's deadliest attack occurred when a bomb struck a truckload of newly recruited

Iraqi soldiers on the outskirts of Baghdad, killing 15 and wounding 20, a police official at the nearest police station said.

During a news conference Sunday in Baghdad, Abbas al-Bayati, a Shiite Turkoman lawmaker, said that in the absence of adequate security forces, authorities should help residents "arm themselves" for their own protection.

The call for civilians to take up arms in their own defense was echoed Sunday by the country's Sunni Arab vice president, Tariq al-Hashemi, who said all Iraqis must "pay the price" for terrorism.

"People have a right to expect from the government and security agencies protection for their lives, land, honor and property," al-Hashemi said in a statement. "But in the case of [their] inability, the people have no choice but to take up their own defense." ROBERT H. REID (AP)

PRIDE

Last Neo-Feminist Milestone Achieved

The Krause family can retain its bragging rights, but its cherry-pit-spitting dynasty may be under siege by a 17-year-old girl. Rick "Pellet Gun" Krause repeated as winner of the International Cherry Spitting Championship held Saturday at the Tree-Mendus Fruit cherry orchard in Michigan, with a spit of 58 feet, 1 1/2 inches. But Krause, 58, needed all three attempts in the championship to outdistance upstart Amanda Jennings, who finished second with 52 feet, 5 1/2 inches. Six-time winner Brian "Young Gun" Krause, Rick's son, took third place with a spit of 49 feet, 6 1/2 inches. (AP)

CONFUSION

At First, the Booty Calls Were Flattering

For months, Shira Barlow's cell phone was flooded with wrong-number calls and text messages, mostly between 2 and 4 a.m. on weekends. Callers thought she was joking when she told them they had reached a college student. Barlow had been given a phone number that used to be Paris Hilton's. Just after Barlow got her new phone close to Hilton's Feb. 17 birthday, a flurry of calls and texts arrived. Then came the day Hilton was sentenced to jail after violating probation. Messages about parties were replaced by condolences. Barlow plans to keep the number because she says it has been a more of a source of amusement than a hassle. (AP)

Special Report solves the "My home isn't selling" problem

WASHINGTON METRO – A "Special Report" explodes what its author exposes as "The myth of slow home sales." In fact, the Report explains, in clear and plain English, how a home owner who wants to sell can not only count on a sale within 120 days but can be guaranteed that the sale will occur.

The Report proves its accuracy by quoting specific local instances in which the technique it describes has sold homes time after time, quickly, efficiently, and at a favorable price.

The author of the report, noted realtor Frank Sanya, has made numerous appearances on both television and radio.

Mr. Sanya states that the Report represents the compendium of his many years of real estate experience and can be of substantial value to homeowners, especially those whose homes have been on the market unsold for a considerable period of time. The author emphasizes that although he does not accept every listing, by following the Report's procedures he accomplishes a sale in every instance in which he is the broker of record.

The secret, says the Report, is a combination of traits and procedures that consistently result in a successful sale. For a free copy of the Report, go to a private but available Web site – www.WantItSoldNow.com.

Dry Conditions Spur Rash of Fires

Firefighters across the western United States working to stop blazes

SIoux FALLS, S.D. | A fast-growing blaze in southwestern South Dakota killed one person and destroyed 20 homes Sunday, while hundreds of people evacuated homes in the path of a fire in Washington state.

In Nevada, about 1,500 evacuees were allowed home hours after a 39-square-mile wildfire burned into the northern town of Winnemucca, fire officials said Sunday. Meanwhile, more than 200 people were allowed to return to a town in California's dry Sierra Nevada range.

Other Western fires blackened the landscape in Colorado, Arizona, Idaho and Oregon.

Residents of about 50 homes had fled a wildfire near Hot Springs, S.D., that also injured two firefighters, state and federal officials said. An area of roughly 8 square miles has burned since the fire started Saturday.

The person killed in South Dakota was identified only as a civilian, either a homeowner or visitor to the tourist area on the edge of the scenic Black Hills.

High wind near Wenatchee, Wash., overnight spread a brush fire that threatened homes. By Sunday morning, 250 to 270 homes had been evacuated, and at least three outbuildings were destroyed.

The Utah Highway Patrol on Sunday reopened a 100-mile stretch of Interstate 15 and 25 miles of I-70 that were closed when a 250-square-mile fire jumped the highways and filled the air with dense smoke Saturday. Poor visibility was blamed for several accidents, including a motorcycle crash that killed two people.

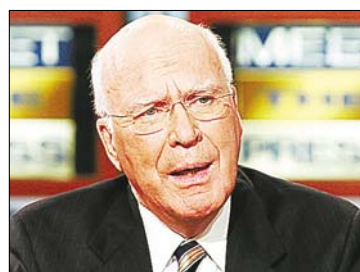

Dangerously dry conditions Sunday also stoked several California wildfires

Flames driven by 60 mph wind charred about 53 square miles in and around the popular John Muir Wilderness north of Mount Whitney, fire officials said. CARSON WALKER (AP) objections.

Sen. Patrick Leahy's, D-Vt., committee has subpoenaed Sara Taylor, a former White House political director, as part of its investigation into whether the Bush administration improperly ordered the U.S. attorneys dismissed.

Taylor's lawyer said she is willing to talk but does not want to defy President Bush, who has rejected subpoenas for documents from Taylor and for her testimony. Lawyer W. Neil Eggleston said Taylor expects a letter from White House lawyer Fred Fielding directing her not to comply on the basis of executive privilege.

President Bush asserted executive privilege in rejecting subpoenas for documents from Taylor and his former counsel, Harriet Miers. Fielding argued that complying would damage the confidential nature of advice given to the president. (AP)

U.S. Volunteer Rate Drops

Community service thriving in Midwest, less common on coasts

WASHINGTON | The spirit of volunteerism is thriving in the heartland, but not so much on the coasts.

Midwesterners are more likely to volunteer their time than are people elsewhere in the United States, according to a government study being released Monday. The highest rates were in the Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan area, where more than four in 10 adults volunteered.

Nationally, 26.7 percent of adults in 2006 said they had volunteered in the previous year. That compares

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

The study said several factors contribute to higher volunteer rates in a community:

- Short commutes to work
- Prevalent homeownership
- High education levels among residents
- High concentrations of non-profit organizations with 28.8 percent in 2005 and 20.4 percent in 1989.

The Corporation for National and Community Service, a federal agency, used Census Bureau data to determine the share of people ages 16 and older who had volunteered their time in the previous year.

Minneapolis-St. Paul was followed at the top by Salt Lake City; Austin, Texas; Omaha, Neb.; and Seattle.

Las Vegas had the lowest volunteer rate at 14.4 percent. It was joined at the bottom by Miami; New York; Virginia Beach, Va.; and Riverside, Calif.

Les Kuivanen of Minneapolis volunteers at an elementary school with other retirees from the manufacturing company Honeywell International.

"I wanted to volunteer because I wanted to give back," he said. "It's fun to golf and fish and hunt, and I do all that. But I wanted to do something that I thought was needed, to help others." STEPHEN OHLEMACHER (AP)

Gates Cancels Trip for Iraq Report

WASHINGTON | Defense Secretary Robert Gates scrapped plans to go on a four-nation tour of Latin America this week and will instead stay home to attend meetings on Iraq, the Pentagon announced Sunday.

The meetings are related to a progress report on Iraq that is due to be delivered to Congress by July 15.

Congress mandated the preliminary report and required it to be followed by another one in September. The report's findings could add to the pressure to end the war or change strategies.

It is due out as a growing number of moderate Republicans voice concerns about President Bush's war strategy. The Senate is expected to start debate this week on a bill authorizing military spending in Iraq. (AP)

Sheehan May Seek Pelosi's Office

Activist vows to join '08 race unless Bush impeachment is tried

CRAWFORD, TEXAS | Cindy Sheehan, the soldier's mother who galvanized the anti-war movement, said Sunday that she plans to run against House Speaker Nancy Pelosi unless she introduces articles of impeachment against President Bush in the next two weeks.

Sheehan said she will run against the California Democrat in 2008 as an independent if Pelosi does not seek by July 23 to impeach Bush.

"Democrats and Americans feel betrayed by the Democratic leadership," Sheehan said. "We hired them to bring an end to the war. ... I would give her a run for her money."

Messages left with Pelosi's staff

Activist Cindy Sheehan says she will run against Rep. Nancy Pelosi unless the California Democrat introduces impeachment articles against President Bush.

were not immediately returned.

Sheehan announced in late May that she was leaving the anti-war movement. She said she felt her efforts had been in vain and that she had endured smear tactics and hatred from the left, as well as from the right.

Sheehan, who has never held political office, recently said she was leaving the Democratic Party because it "caved" in to the president.

"I didn't expect to be back so soon, but the focus is different than it was before," Sheehan said. "Instead of talking and making accusations, we're going into communities and talking to the people who've been hurt by the Bush regime. We're finding out how we can help people."

Arab League Set for First Israel Visit

Seeking to aid Abbas, Israelis OK release of Palestinian prisoners

JERUSALEM | The 22-country Arab League will send envoys on a historic first mission to Israel this week to discuss a sweeping Arab peace initiative and how it might prop up embattled Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas, Israeli and Arab diplomats said Sunday.

The announcement came the same day Israel's Cabinet approved the release of 250 Palestinian prisoners, hoping to bolster Abbas in his power struggle with the Islamic militant Hamas.

An official League visit would be a diplomatic coup for Israel. The League historically has been hostile toward the Jewish state, but has grown increasingly conciliatory in response to the expanding influence of Islamic extremists in the region — a concern underscored by Hamas' violent takeover of the Gaza Strip last month.

Jordan's foreign ministry said the Jordanian and Egyptian foreign ministers would arrive in Jerusalem on Thursday for talks with Prime Minister Ehud Olmert and other Israeli officials.

Abbas

Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman Mark Regev said the foreign ministers would lead an Arab League mission to Israel to discuss the Arab peace plan, which would trade full Arab recognition of Israel for an Israeli withdrawal from all lands captured in the 1967 Mideast war and the creation of a Palestinian state.

The two foreign ministers, Abdul-Ilah al-Khatib of Jordan and Ahmed Aboul Gheit of Egypt — whose countries have peace agreements with Israel — have been designated as the League's official point men for the Arab peace initiative.

Pakistani Rhetoric Heats Up

Government says wanted terrorists are in control of mosque

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Terrorists wanted for attacks in Pakistan and beyond are leading the resistance against troops besieging a radical Islamic seminary, the government said Sunday, while a mosque spokesman claimed hundreds died in an overnight assault.

It was impossible to verify either claim in the escalating battle of gunfire and rhetoric between the government and the defenders of Islamabad's Red Mosque.

President Gen. Pervez Musharraf sent in troops Wednesday, a day after supporters of the mosque's radical clerics fought gunbattles with security forces sent to contain their campaign to impose Taliban-style rule.

At least 24 people have died so far, including a special forces commando shot as the military blasted holes in the walls of the fortified compound. Officials said they hoped hundreds of students allegedly being held hostage could use the gaps to escape.

Religious Affairs Minister Ejaz ul-Haq said terrorists, including a suspect in a plot against Pakistan's prime minister, were in control of the mosque. SADAQAT JAN (AP)

Afghan Anti-Drug Minister Resigns

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | Afghanistan's counternarcotics minister has resigned only weeks after Afghan laborers finished cultivating an opium poppy crop that could exceed last year's record haul.

Habibullah Qaderi's resignation, confirmed Sunday, came as U.S. and Afghan officials debate privately whether to use herbicides to reduce the drug problem.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai rejected that approach for the 2007 growing season, partly because some Afghans fear the chemicals could affect livestock, legitimate crops and drinking water, fears the U.S. says are unfounded.

Much of the profit from the country's $3.1 billion drug trade is believed to fund Taliban fighters waging a violent campaign against the government. Officials said Sunday recent clashes between police and insurgents left 11 suspected militants dead in the south, while Taliban fighters ambushed police in Kandahar province, wounding 15 officers. # Kamikaze Pilots Gaining New Fame

Some see WWII fliers as role models for the youth in Japan today

CHIRAN, JAPAN | On April 12, 1945, Lt. Shinichi Uchida faced a terrifying mission — crash his plane into a U.S. warship. But the young kamikaze's final letter to his grandparents was full of bravado.

"Now I'll go and get rid of those devils," the 18-year-old wrote shortly before his final flight, vowing to "bring back the neck" of President Roosevelt. He never returned.

For many, such words are redolent of the militarism that drove Japan to ruin in World War II. But for an increasingly bold cadre of conservatives, Uchida's words symbolize something else: just the kind of guts and commitment that Women look at photos of Japanese kamikaze pilots hanging on a wall at the Peace Museum for Kamikaze Pilots in Chiran, Japan. Kamikazes' popularity is rising.

Japanese youth need today.

The suicidal flyers are now being glorified in "I Go to Die For You," a film written by Tokyo's governor, Shintaro Ishihara. And more than 500,000 people per year visit a museum about the kamikazes in the southern town of Chiran, near the airstrip where Uchida and others took off.

No one is publicly calling for young Japanese to kill themselves for the nation these days. But the renewed hero-worship of the kamikazes coincides with a general trend in Japanese society toward seeing the country's war effort as noble and mourning the fading of the ethic of self-sacrifice amid today's wealth.

"When you get to the roots of the Japanese soul, I think they are embodied in the kamikaze pilots," said the film's director, Taku Shinjo.

Japanese Prince Tomohito Says He's an Alcoholic

TOKYO | A senior member of the royal family has begun speaking publicly about his alcoholism, breaking a deep taboo about problem drinking, which many Japanese consider too shameful to discuss.

"I'm Prince Tomohito, the alcoholic," the 61-year-old cousin of Emperor Akihito said Saturday in a lecture at a nonprofit center for the disabled in Sendai.

The prince's alcoholism has been considered an embarrassment for officials at the palace, which tends to keep secret anything that might harm the royal family's image.

Despite palace doctors' reluctance to disclose his condition, Tomohito said that he went public because "there is nothing to hide about." (AP)

Britain: Long Fight With Terror Ahead

Security chief warns battle with militants may take up to 15 years

LONDON | Britain's new security chief warned on Sunday that the battle against domestic militancy could take up to 15 years and said Britons must start sharing information about neighbors they suspect of involvement in terrorism.

Adm. Sir Alan West, the former navy chief who was recently named Prime Minister Gordon Brown's security minister, said the level of the threat Britain faced was unprecedented and a new approach was critical.

One of those approaches included challenges to the British psyche, he said.

"Britishness does not normally involve snitching or talking about someone," he told the Sunday Telegraph. "I'm afraid, in this situation, anyone who's got any information should say something, because the people we are talking about are trying to destroy our entire way of life."

He said preventing the radicalization of young British Muslims was his top priority.

"This is not a quick thing," he said. "I believe it will take 10 to 15 years. But I think it can be done as long as we, as a nation, apply ourselves to it and it's done across the board."

Meanwhile, authorities acknowledged no armed police were on duty at Glasgow airport June 30 when two men crashed a Jeep Cherokee laden with gas into the main terminal.

Britain's terrorism threat level was "severe" at the time of the attack — the second-highest level, which means an attack is highly likely. It remains at that level.

It is up to individual police forces to decide how to deal with the threat level, a Home Office spokeswoman said on condition of anonymity in line with department policy. D'ARCY DORAN (AP)

Teenager Dead After Car Crash

Another teen arrested after fleeing location of alleged robberies

WASHINGTON | One teenager is dead and another is under arrest after an alleged crime spree Sunday morning ended with a fatal crash. A third person in the car got away.

Sgt. Joe Gentile of the D.C. police says the group was first spotted shortly before 7 a.m. A woman in Northeast fended off a robber armed with a knife.

Police say the attacker fled in a red Toyota Scion with two other people.

A few minutes later nearby, a knife-wielding robber took another woman's purse. This time, the Scion took off at a high speed down Michigan Avenue and crashed while attempting to turn.

One of the passengers in the car, Alex A. Garcia, 18, was pronounced dead. The second passenger in the car managed to escape. (AP)

D.C. Issues Code Orange Heat Alert

City to open cooling centers; Fairfax to provide free bus rides

Temperatures rose to the mid-90s Sunday and are expected to hover at that level through most of Wednesday, when the mini-sizzler gives way to what one meteorologist described as a more seasonally appropriate "cold front" the mid-to-upper 80s.

"We're talking relative terms here, we're not talking absolutes," said Calvin Meadows, a National Weather Service spokesman.

The heat wave has prompted the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments to issue a code orange alert, indicating air quality that is unhealthy for children, the elderly and people with heart or respiratory ailments.

The District government today is opening cooling centers at One Judiciary Square, the Frank D. Reeves Center on 14th Street, the King Office Building on Martin Luther King Avenue SE, and the Public Center on M Street SW.

In Fairfax County, officials announced that the Fairfax Connector will provide free transportation Monday, hoping to reduce the number of vehicles on the road.

Sunday's temperature did not come close to eclipsing the record of 100 degrees, which was set in 1993. In fact, the first week of July was bit cooler than average by 1.9 degrees, Meadows said.

Adams Morgan Bar Limitations Sought

Restaurant owners argue tavern licenses necessary for survival

WASHINGTON | Some D.C. residents are urging the city council to approve a measure that would limit the proliferation of taverns in Adams Morgan.

The number of taverns in the area has grown from three to eleven since 2004, and some say the increase is contributing to violent crime.

The council measure would limit the number of tavern licenses in the area to 10, with existing taverns grandfathered in. Under D.C. law, restaurants serving alcohol must get $2,000 a seat or 45 percent of their annual revenues from food sales. Taverns, however, are allowed to serve as much alcohol as they want.

Some restaurant owners say their businesses can survive only as taverns because Adams Morgan doesn't attract daytime crowds that could help them sell more food. (AP)

Leesburg May Ban Drive-Throughs

LEESBURG, VA. | Drive-through service windows soon could be banned in parts of Leesburg if two members of the town council get their way.

The council members want to ban new drive-through windows in a commercial zone between downtown Leesburg and the Route Seven Bypass.

They say they want to make the area more attractive and pedestrian-friendly, arguing it has become overrun with banks and fast-food restaurants.

But the president of the Loudoun County Chamber of Commerce says the ban would hurt businesses and consumers, who would miss out on the convenience of drive-through transactions.

The Leesburg Town Council could vote as early as Tuesday on whether to forward the proposal to the Planning Commission. (AP)

Personal Tech

While some restaurants have adopted the pay-at-the-table credit and debit card devices, the technology lags in the U.S. compared to elsewhere in the world.

Swipe at Your Table

Manufacturers push restaurants to use DIY card scanners

PAYMENT | It's becoming routine for customers to swipe their credit or debit cards at consoles in fast-food joints, gas stations and grocery stores. So, why do we still hand over the plastic at sit-down restaurants?

Pay-at-the-table systems are popular in Europe and other parts of the world, but they haven't yet caught on in the U.S., largely because equipment makers haven't been able to point to a reason why restaurateurs should invest in the gear.

Manufacturers now see an opportunity. A rise in the number of "skimming" scams in which waiters use handheld computers to quietly record customers' credit card information and sell it is creating a sense of urgency.

Verifone's VX-670 is about the size of a thick remote control and sports a square LCD screen and a numerical keypad. It accepts debit and credit cards and can automatically add the tip. Once the customer swipes a card, the information is sent wirelessly to a computer in the restaurant.

The Blade, a competitor from rival Hypercom Corp., is a sleek, handheld unit. But it also sports a touch screen that can double as a menu and an optional contactless reader that lets customers wave their cards instead of swiping them.

Both companies are betting restaurants will be more willing to buy the systems — which can cost several hundred dollars — as security threats increase. Some studies suggest as much as 70 percent of all cases of credit card skimming stem from restaurant scams.

The manufacturers say there's another benefit: productivity. "If we can tell them they can increase table turns on peak hours by 1 to 4 percent, what's that worth to businesses?" said Scott Goldthwaite, a vice president at Hypercom.

'Tank' Takes Tiger's Tournament

Choi shoots 68 in final round to finish at 9-under for the win

AT&T NATIONAL | Five weeks ago, K.J. Choi received a trophy from Jack Nicklaus. On Sunday, he got one from Tiger Woods.

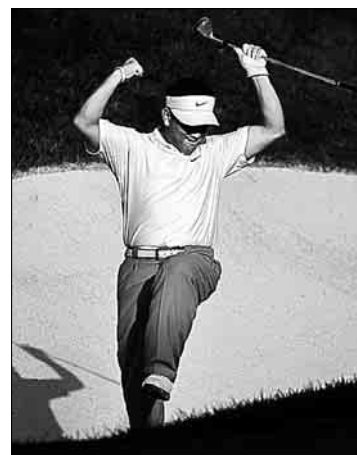

The biggest name in South Korean golf was again the prized guest at a golf party thrown by an American star, punctuating an adventurous back nine with a great bunker shot on his way to a three-stroke victory over Steve Stricker at the inaugural AT&T National.

Choi shot a final-round 68 for a 9-under 271 total to win for the sixth time on the PGA Tour, the most victories by an Asian-born player, and his $1.08 million check matched the one he got for winning Nicklaus' Memorial last month.

Last week, Woods joined Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer as players to host a tour event. The event was

Bryant Bests Watson in Duel At Senior Open

GOLF | Brad Bryant took advantage of another U.S. Senior Open flameout by Tom Watson, shooting a 1-under-par 71 on Sunday to complete the second-biggest comeback in tournament history.

Bryant's birdie on the 16th hole at Whistling Straits gave him the lead as Watson frittered away six shots in a five-hole stretch on the back nine — the latest in a series of final-round disappointments for Watson in the high-profile senior major. He shot a 6-over 78 to finish 1-under for the tournament, behind Bryant, Ben Crenshaw at 3-under and Loren Roberts at 2-under.

Bryant, 52, won only once in more than two decades on the PGA Tour. But he finished third on the Champions Tour money list last year. (AP)

Out Early, Woods Enjoys Last Round

Tiger never really had a chance but called the tourney a success

AT&T NATIONAL | An uneven performance on the front nine in Sunday's final round ensured Tiger Woods would be awarding — not accepting — the inaugural AT&T National championship trophy.

Woods, who entered the day seven strokes off the lead in a tie for eighth place, double bogeyed the 602-yard, par-5 ninth to fall to 3 over for the round. He went on to finish tied for sixth place at 2-under for the tournament.

"It basically put me out of the tournament," Woods said of the double bogey. "I had to go out there and play a picture perfect back nine — and hope."

His early downturn transformed his round from competitive to celebratory, as the massive gallery that followed him in the extreme heat at Congressional Country Club showered him with appreciation for bringing the tournament to the area. He and champion K.J. Choi were the only golfers who received standing ovations coming up the 18th fairway.

GAIL BURTON/AP

Tiger Woods finished seven strokes back but still called his tourney a success

"I didn't get a 'W,' so that was frustrating in that sense," Woods said. "But this tournament, in general, has been a bigger success than anyone could have imagined."

Woods parred the first three holes Sunday but bogeyed the par-4 fourth after his approach from the fairway landed well short of the green.

a red, white and blue spectacle surrounding the Fourth of July, but Choi added to the international flair, attracting a gallery of local Korean-Americans that cheered him in his native language.

One fan held a sign with a Korean flag with the words "Go Tank," a reference to the nickname Choi earned after powerlifting 350 pounds as a 95-pound 13-year-old. He's also known for learning the game from a golf instructional book in Korean that featured pictures of Nicklaus, a present from a physical education teacher.

Choi, 37, wavered with three bogeys early on the back nine, jostling with Stricker atop the leaderboard, but steadied himself with a 12-foot birdie putt at the 15th to take a two-shot lead.

That shot was worth two fist pumps, but the celebration was bigger at the 17th, where Choi holed from the greenside trap for a birdie. Choi took off his visor, retrieved the ball and threw it into the crowd, assured that he would be the one to win the trophy that was a replica of the Capitol building. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

His frustration then began to show when he dropped to even with a bogey at the 174-yard, par-3 7th.

Woods hit his tee shot in the rough to the left of the green and bladed his second shot over the green and into a bunker. The normally meticulous Woods then stormed over to his ball and hurriedly swiped it onto the green without a practice swing. Still, he sank the 15-foot bogey putt.

The momentum from that putt carried over to par-4 eighth, which he birdied despite landing his tee shot in the left rough.

Woods finished his round with consecutive birdies and a smile. He was overwhelmingly pleased with the attendance for the weekend, which surpassed 139,000. The galleries — his, in particular — were vocal, energetic and knowledgeable.

"It was young, it was vivacious, it was special," Woods said. "To see that many kids out, that was just like how it was back when I first turned pro." (AP)

For Federer, It's a Party of Five

Five-set classic over Nadal secures 5th straight Wimbledon

TENNIS | Roger Federer hit an overhead smash to capture his fifth straight Wimbledon title. He then collapsed to his knees in jubilation and relief — just as Bjorn Borg used to do.

Federer played — and won — his first five-setter in a Grand Slam final, beating nemesis Rafael Nadal 7-6 (7), 4-6, 7-6 (3), 2-6, 6-2 Sunday for his 11th major title.

Federer is the first man to win five straight titles at the All England Club since Borg did it from 1976 to 1980. The Swede watched the match and applauded as Federer fell to the ground after his smash on the match point.

After Federer left the court, he and Borg exchanged hugs and smiles in front of the board that lists tournament champions. Federer's name had already been added to the list for 2007.

"Thank you for coming out," Federer told Borg.

"Not at all. Sure," Borg answered.

Roger Federer added another win to his grass-court record 53 consecutive victories despite looking vulnerable at times.

CLOSING IN

Roger Federer is just three major titles away from Pete Sampras' career record of 14:

- Pete Sampras - 14 titles
- Roy Emerson - 12 titles
- Roger Federer - 11 titles
- Rod Laver - 11 titles
- Bjorn Borg - 11 titles and his Wimbledon winning streak to 34. He is tied for third on the career list with Borg and Rod Laver at 11 major titles, trailing Pete Sampras' 14 and Roy Emerson's 12.

"Each one is special, no doubt," Federer said. "To hold the trophy is always the best thing."

Federer beat Nadal for only the fifth time in 13 meetings. The Spaniard has defeated Federer in the past two French Open finals to spoil his bid to complete a career Grand Slam.

"It was such a close match," Federer said. "I told Rafa at the net he deserved it as well. I'm the lucky one today." CHRIS LEHOURITES (AP)

Crash Can't Slow Down Englishman

McEwen wins a stage at home after being hit by another rider

CYCLING | Lance Armstrong knew a thing or two about how to bounce back from a crash to win a stage at the Tour de France.

On Sunday, Robbie McEwen showed he does, too.

The Australian sprint ace showed his grit by winning Sunday's first stage in a much needed display of athletic ability for a sport battling to overcome an image problem because of various doping scandals.

McEwen clocked 4 hours, 39 minutes, 1 second for the mostly flat, 126-mile ride to Canterbury from London.

With just 12 miles to go, McEwen was forced to break and was hit by a cyclist from behind — sending him tumbling over his handlebars.

Robbie McEwen celebrates his stage win shortly after flying over his handlebars.

Pressing on despite an aching right wrist and cuts on his right knee, McEwen was escorted by his teammates through the final meters.

"This is definitely one of the best ever," McEwen said. "After the crash, I hurt myself — hurt my wrist — but the boys brought me back. I still can't believe I won this stage." JAMEY KEATEN (AP)

Redding (1-1) had not prevailed in a start since July 24, 2004, for Houston against Milwaukee. His last victory, in relief on Sept. 26, 2004, also came against the Brewers for the Astros. Redding went six innings, allowing two runs and five hits. He walked one and struck out one.

The right-hander's day began ominously when his cleat caught in the mound clay during his wind-up while he was pitching from the stretch against the game's third bat-

TRANSFORMED TO GOLD: "Transformers" swept the box office last weekend, raking in $67.6 million. Since it opened July 3, the action-packed flick has pulled in an impressive $152.5 million. Pixar's "Ratatouille" came in second with $29 million.

Where Art the Pants?

Everyone enjoys 'Macbeth' — unless it's performed naked

NUDITY | Audience reactions to the Washington Shakespeare Company's "Macbeth" are telling: Folks in the front sometimes cringe and move back a few rows during intermission. One man watched the play with a program in front of his eyes, blocking out the lower half of his field of vision.

Clearly, an all-nude production of the Shakespearean tragedy is not for everyone.

Despite mixed reviews, the play has drawn healthy audiences to the small theater company's playhouse in Northern Virginia, and the director and cast say the production is fulfilling its artistic vision: exposing the primal nature of man's ambitions and fears.

The play's director, Jose Carrasquillo, said he was inspired to create a radically different visual presentation after reading the same histories of the Scottish people that Shakespeare is believed to have read before writing "Macbeth." They described "a really tribal, almost animal-like clan and society," Carrasquillo said. "I thought it would be amazing to do a show with this feel in mind."

"MACBETH" IN THE BUFF: The Washington Shakespeare Company's production of "Macbeth" is true to the text, considering the Bard did not specify a dress code.

Then he focused on the three witches who open the play. Carrasquillo envisioned them as conjurers who actually bring the players in "Macbeth" to life. So, in his version, the actors begin on stage as trees and come to life, naked and dirty, only after the witches make it so.

At no point are any of the actors covered, except for some mudlike makeup on their bodies. And all 10 performers remain on stage for the entire performance. The three witches, for example, crouch and scour and watch the action from the sidelines of the bare triangular stage, hissing their approval as the plot moves toward the vision they have foretold.

Cast members say the audience response has varied from performance to performance. Kathleen Akerley, who plays Lady Macbeth, said the audience has been much more willing to volunteer its opinions, both positive and negative.

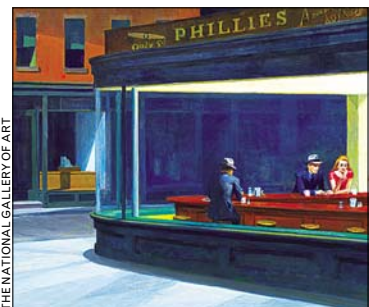

"It's been a really fascinating phenomenon," Akerley said. Almost always, audience members will say they quickly got used to the nudity. But she suspects that while some people acclimate themselves, others merely block it out of their minds, which to a certain extent blunts its intended impact.

An especially telling scene — in terms of audience reaction — occurs in the second act, when a drunken porter pointedly refers to alcohol's effect on lechery and sexual arousal. The humorous scene evokes laughter from some audiences and uncomfortable silence from others, said Sasha Olinick, who portrays the porter.

"It forces (the audience) to recognize that your own mores, your own values come into play," Olinick said. MATTHEW BARAKAT (AP)

Witty Songs From Odd Birds

New Zealand's duo of funnymen snag a prime spot on HBO

FUNNY | Pity the musical comedy fan. For years, Weird Al Yankovic was the highest-profile parodist on the scene, and not until the Jack Black-Kyle Gass duo Tenacious D came along did "mock rock" gain any kind of traction in today's irony-drenched culture.

Enter New Zealand's Flight of the Conchords. The duo of Jemaine Clement and Bret McKenzie write their own songs, skewering entire genres of music with a witty affection that has gained them cult followings from London to New York. This summer, the Kiwis graduate from cult sensation to pop phenomenon, thanks to the HBO show "Flight of the Conchords," which documents the fictional band trying to "make it" (or simply get a paid gig) in Manhattan.

Long before the cable network

Flight of the Conchords sing a song titled "You Could Be a Part-Time Model."

called upon Clement and McKenzie to help save its post-"Sopranos" Sunday night lineup, Flight of the Conchords toured the world, playing at tiny venues in London and at gatherings such as Edinburgh's Fringe Festival.

The United States is the final frontier for the duo, whose brand of dry, witty comedy seems more suited for British audiences. While U.S. audiences, to an extent, embraced Tenacious D, there are many (according to postings by HBO subscribers on hbo.com message boards) who simply don't "get" Flight of the Conchords. # Double Threat

The singer-turned-actress surprises with a musical shift

SINGSTRESS | Mandy Moore, the angel-faced actress and sometime singer, interrupted her recent concert in Manhattan to grumble for a moment about the men who did her wrong.

The statuesque 23-year-old, who split from TV star Zach Braff last year and has dated tennis hunk Andy Roddick and man-about-town Wilmer Valderrama, sings through some heavy stuff on "Wild Hope," her first studio album in more than three years.

The folk-pop disc, released last month and recorded in New York's rustic Catskill mountains, is a departure from the bubblegum music of Moore's not-so-distant past. Produced by John Alagia, who's shaped albums by Dave Matthews and Liz Phair, its acoustic sound and mature themes of heartbreak and personal growth would be more at home in a coffee shop than on popular radio. And Moore, who has had more success as an actress than she ever did as a singer, is fine with that.

After all, her star continues to rise in film, overshadowing her singing career and forays into fashion design. She currently co-stars with Robin Williams in the new comedy "License to Wed," and will appear later this summer in the art-house romance "Dedication." Music, however, remains her biggest passion.

"It's just where my heart really is. I love going back and forth and doing a little bit of [singing and acting]. I feel fulfilled creatively by a little bit of both," she said.

Moore, who tackled classic songs in her 2003 album, the low-selling "Coverage," eventually signed with the Firm Music, a new label run by her management company. As part of the deal, in which artist and label share ownership of each record, Moore gets full creative control. She co-wrote every track on "Wild Hope," bringing little-known singer-songwriters Lori McKenna and Rachel Yamagata into her team of collaborators.

Recording the album last year, she said, was "completely cathartic" and helped her sail through a low point in her life following her breakup with Braff.

"I just was, like, ugh, why do I feel so icky and why do I feel confused?" she recalls. "Who am I? What do I want to define me? A bunch of questions on top of, like, working really hard and going through a breakup and having all this stuff sort of hit me all at once." ERIN CARLSON (AP)

Jim Carrey Says 'Bah, Humbug!'

ACE | He already has played the Grinch, and now Jim Carrey is out to ruin Christmas all over again, this time playing Ebenezer Scrooge.

Walt Disney Pictures announced Friday that Carrey will play the lead role in the computer-animated, 3-D retelling of "A Christmas Carol," to be directed by Robert Zemeckis. And because Carrey is Carrey, he'll play Scrooge at different ages as well as the ghosts of Christmas past, present and future that haunt Ebenezer and make him rethink his misguided ways.

The film will be distributed by Disney. JOHN HORN (LA TIMES)

TV Is Turning Green

Environmental issues are everywhere — including on the tube

EARTH | If government scientists haven't come through with solutions to the planet's environmental ills, not to worry. TV is on it.

This summer, the government-relocated geniuses who comprise the fictional town of "Eureka" on the Sci Fi Channel will tackle issues such as global warming, solar energy and recycling. Season 2 will premiere Tuesday.

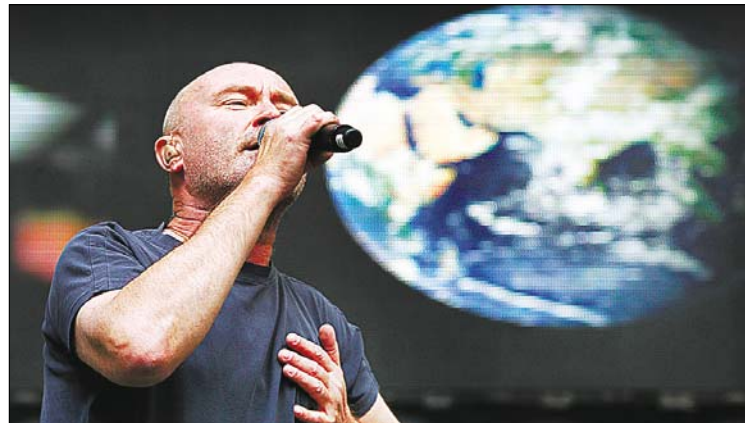

Green issues have been sprouting up all over television in recent months. July 7's "Live Earth," the seven-continent musical extravaganza to illuminate ways to combat global warming, aired on NBC, Bravo, CNBC, the Sundance Channel, Universal HD, Telemundo and others.

And the Sundance Channel has already launched a prime-time block of environmental programming called "The Green" that has brought attention to peanut oil fuel, a home made out of living trees and eco-friendly cities.

Similarly, the Discovery Channel, encouraged by the success of its series "Planet Earth," recently announced it will dedicate its home channel to a 24-hour environmental channel next year.

One of its first big projects will be "Ten Ways to Save the Planet," featuring ing scientists' most imaginative solutions to environmental crises.

SINGING FOR THE TREES: The "Live Earth" concert was widely broadcasted.

The reason, said David Howe, Sci Fi's executive vice president and general manager, is that the media — even through such off-beat dramedies as "Eureka" — have taken responsibility for change. "If we have to wait for the federal government to act" in real life, he said, "it may be too late."

A worldwide movement has focused on all things green — cars, food and architecture among them. While many companies have set aside "green budgets" for advertising, U.S. networks have been jostling for their share of the pie.

After Sundance's "The Green" winds up on Tuesday with two documentaries — one on how religious people reaffirm their faith through nature and another on global warming threats to four cities — the channel has another series in store. "It's Not Easy Being Green," an eight-part series premiering July 17, will document one family's efforts to become self-sufficient.

Even the Travel Channel has advertised Jeff Corwin's "Into Alaska" show as a "green getaway" at a time when "it is not only responsible but genuinely 'hip' to be green."

HE'S NOT FIRED YET: The Donald gets one more chance from NBC. Executives there have agreed to bring back his originally popular show, "The Apprentice," for at least one more season, despite the fact that no one will ever live up to Omarosa.

Watch the Yankees

Series captures a pivotal season in the ball team's history

BOMBERS | You don't have to be a Yankees fan to love "The Bronx Is Burning" (10 p.m., ESPN), an ambitious, intelligent and consistently rewarding miniseries debuting tonight, then airing weekly on Tuesday nights through Aug. 28.

Based on a nonfiction book of the same name by Jonathan Mahler, "Bronx" uses the 1977 Yankees season as the central story in a look at a tumultuous year in New York City history.

NOT JUST A GAME: "The Bronx Is Burning" is based on Mahler's book.

At the heart of "the Bronx" is the tempestuous relationship between Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner (Oliver Platt), his manager Billy Martin (John Turturro) and slugger Reggie Jackson (Daniel Sunjata), a recently arrived superstar with a huge contract and matching ego.

"Bronx" does a credible job of splicing vintage news and sports footage with dramatic scenes. The series affects a deliberately cheap and gritty look that reminds us how much has changed since 1977. The Yankees' locker rooms and clubhouse appear rather shabby. Even tycoon Steinbrenner's affectations seem modest by today's standards of glitz and conspicuous consumption. But then we've had 30 years of tabloid media, steroid-abusing athletes and a win-at-any-cost corporate culture to acclimate us to our brave new world. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

FRATASTIC
Set in the fraternity/sorority world of the fictional Cyprus Rhodes University, the new teen soap GREEK (9 p.m., Family) concerns Rusty (Jacob Zachar), the sweet-but-dweeby freshman engineering student who wants to transcend his geek status by going Greek.

THE RIGHT DIRECTION
The acclaimed director of films from "Jaws" to "Saving Private Ryan" looks back at his work and his influences on SPIELBERG ON SPIELBERG (8 p.m., TCM).

STRICTLY FOR HEALTH REASONS
The documentary IN POT WE TRUST (8:30 p.m., Showtime) looks at medicinal marijuana.

GREAT MIND: Steven Spielberg talks about himself tonight on TCM.

THEY FROWN ON POLYGAMY
Wayne's new parochial school poses problems on "Big Love" (9 p.m., HBO).

SOUNDS STIMULATING
A headless body in a mindless plot on CSI: MIAMI (10 p.m., CBS).

Architecture

As barns crumble in the Midwest, some aim to preserve them

As a kid in Oregon, Larry Kanfer's horizons were dominated by the steep, green slopes and conic peaks of the Cascades.

When his family moved to table-flat Urbana, Ill., Kanfer, a photographer, found that what first appeared to be the monotony of Midwestern plains was broken by its own more modest peaks — the roofs of barns that once were the heart of every farm.

Now those barns are fading from the landscape, victims of age, urban sprawl, cost-prohibitive maintenance and lack of a practical purpose.

"The barns have been the center of American rural life for centuries," Kanfer said. "But they're really going away pretty quickly."

It's tough to say just how many barns dot the American landscape, or how quickly they're falling down or being bulldozed. But barn preservationists say they're disappearing at a fairly rapid clip, particularly in the Midwest.

Rod Scott of the National Barn Alliance, a preservation group, estimates the U.S. has maybe 2 million barns left, down from what he figures was the peak, around 1920, when there were 6.4 million farms in the country.

"Nowhere else in the world [except the Midwest] can you see what we call the Prairie Cathedral," said Scott, a New Mexico native who became fascinated by barns when he moved to Iowa in 1998.

Kanfer has spent the past few months crisscrossing Illinois, photographing barns as his own way of preserving them. The state's last 16-sided barn — listed on the National Register of Historic Places — collapsed in late May, just days after Larry Kanfer took pictures of it.

ROD SCOTT, NATIONAL BARN ALLIANCE

Wallace Yoder, president of the Bloomington, Ill.-based BarnKeep-ers, says old barns are disappearing because they are too expensive to maintain. And the structures — particularly in grain-farming states like Illinois and Indiana — serve little practical purpose. Barns were built primarily for livestock, which is now a small business in much of the Midwest. Old barns simply aren't big enough to store modern combines, planters and other farm machinery.

"Someday, we wake up and the barns are all gone, and it's gonna be tough to educate our future generations," Yoder said.

Kanfer watched a farmer tear down a barn a few months ago near Neoga, Ill., because he couldn't afford to keep it.

"The wife was there, the son was there and the father," he said. "It was a real sentimental kind of issue."

Most interest in saving barns, Scott said, comes from urban dwellers and others like himself with no direct connection to farming. Modern agriculture emphasizes progress, while historic preservation is an expensive luxury that most farms can't afford.

"We're literally at the end, in a generation, maybe two, of this great family farming era, which was pretty much from the 1600s to now," Scott said. DAVID MERCER (AP)

Florida's Grape Escape

Wine

Blemished fruit is the key ingredient for a new type of winery

For Peter and Denisse Schnebly, sweet dreams are made of this: wine, from carambola, lychee and mangoes that won't grow in cooler climates.

Instead of using grapes, the Schneblys are embracing Florida's agricultural strengths. In the process, they're hoping to lure visitors away from the world-class beaches, international fashion designers and hot Latin sounds of South Beach to experience other aspects of the region's natural beauty.

"Does it really matter what you made the wine from?" Peter Schnebly said. "Isn't it more important that you made a good wine?"

Twenty to 40 percent of a tropical fruit crop can't be sold because it's either blemished or too ripe. Schnebly Redland's Winery was started with fruit the couple would have thrown away.

The Schneblys started selling their wine in 2005 to cut the waste from their tropical fruit orchards.

The couple farms about 100 acres in the Redland area west of Homestead, Fla., and got the idea to make wine a few years earlier from one of Peter's friends in upstate New York.

“We had growers that were dumping this stuff away, and now we’re making wine out of that.”

DENISSE SCHNEBLY, WINEMAKER

"We had growers that were dumping this stuff away, and now we're making wine out of that," Denisse Schnebly said. "And we're paying them for it."

The Schneblys weren't the first ones to start using tropical fruit for wine. Florida Orange Groves Inc. and Winery in St. Petersburg has been at it for more than a decade, making wine from mangoes, guavas and passion fruit.

Schnebly wine has already met with success, pulling in several awards. But the couple hopes to break down the stigma that non-grape wines are somehow inferior.

"We're not making any cheap wine," Denisse Schnebly said. "We're making serious table wines that can be paired with food. And, believe me, they will make food taste better."

Allen Susser, head chef and proprietor of Chef Allen's in Miami, believes the Schneblys are making more than a novelty wine. Besides selling their mango and passion fruit wines at his restaurant, which serves New World cuisine, Susser also likes to cook with them.

"It goes well with our food," he said. "We have a lot of tropical food, fresh fish."

Besides trying to market Schnebly Redland's Winery, the Schneblys hopes to bring agrotourism to the area. Situated between the Everglades and Biscayne National Park, the Redland area, they say, is a perfect destination for tourists who want to get away from the beach for a day.

"The wine is just the sexiness on top of the whole thing," Peter Schnebly said. "We draw more attention because we're a winery. If we were a pig farm, nobody would care."

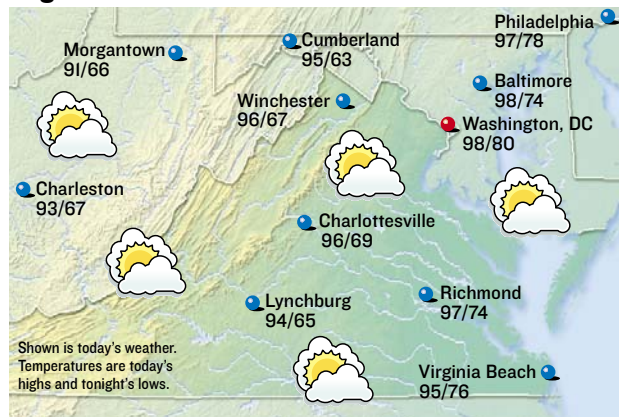

Miami-Dade County Commissioner Dennis Moss, whose district includes the Redland area, sees agrotourism as a way to help growers resist pressure from developers.

"People will continue to keep agricultural land for agriculture as long as it remains profitable," Moss said. DAVID FISCHER (AP)

PARIS
REPORT

Paris haute couture shows embrace luxury, weirdness

Watching the gowns at the Christian Lacroix haute couture show on July 3 was like seeing fabric sculptures come to life.

The French designer celebrated his 20th year in business with a sumptuous collection of outfits that swathed the body in folds of rich velvet or puffs of featherlight chiffon.

The setting was almost monastic in its simplicity — a plain white catwalk in a white room at the Palais de Tokyo modern art museum. That left guests free to contemplate lush embroidery and intricate weaves as complex as any work of art.

Models with hair mounted into huge coifs paraded in coats embellished with ethnic details, such as silver studs, rustic embroidery and monkey hair trim.

A midnight blue faille opera cape was fit for a duchess, but one could not help wondering how many duchesses these days are in need of opera coats. Today's customers more often are the newly rich of Eastern Europe and Asia.

"The top 1 percent of the population of the world, which are extremely rich, are getting much, much richer, and so consequently they have lots more disposable income, and this is how they choose to spend their money," said Glenda Bailey, editor of Harper's Bazaar magazine.

Couture represents the apex of fashion, with made-to-measure gowns that cost upward of $10,000 apiece. It also represents beauty for beauty's sake.

"Even if they are not the type of women you see everywhere all the time, even if their daily life is not close to ours, it is nonetheless a world that exists and that can add a touch of poetry to everyday life,"

Chanel's Karl Lagerfeld kept some traditional touches, like the basic shape of the famous suit, but added modern accents.

Christian Lacroix embraced form over function — typical in haute couture shows — with this dress and hat thingy.

Lacroix told reporters after the show.

Karl Lagerfeld's display for Chanel should have been a moment of poetry in a bucolic setting. Instead, it turned into a logistical fiasco as dozens of taxis clogged up the roads leading to the venue, the park of Saint-

Cloud outside Paris. Guests were still scrambling in from pouring rain when the show started, an hour late, in the estate that has played home to historical figures from Marie Antoinette to Napoleon Bonaparte.

Under a dripping awning, models paraded in sequined shifts with full sleeves attached to the side of the body like tufted and feathered wings. A dark stain grew on the hem of a shimmering lilac coat as it trailed on the soaking gravel.

Lagerfeld played with volume, splitting open a white cocoon shift to reveal panels encrusted with silver sequins. Meanwhile, a see-through black chiffon column featured a pannier of ruffles on each hip.

Drinks

Black Is Blech

Mmm, iced tea. Which should be made with Lipton and perhaps a simple syrup of sugar and water. It should not taste like the new SNAPPLE CLASSIC BLACK TEAS ($1.39, grocery stores). All three of the varieties should have been tossed overboard in Boston in 1773. The Earl Grey tastes like water that maybe was near some tea at some point; the English Breakfast is overwhelmed by an artificial sweetness. The best is the Orange Pekoe, which has enough tartness to balance out the aspartame taste.

You know those cute linen capris you've been wearing all summer? Well, we can see your underwear through them. You can solve the problem with the new (UNDER) GARMENT GUARD ($8 for 7, Nordstrom), a thin piece of cotton with adhesive on the back that you just slap on the crotch of your summer pants. We had problems peeling off the back, rendering two of the test panties unusable. Once we got one situated, things were fine. There was some minor bunching as we moved, but nothing that showed through the cloth. We could never get used to the going-commando feeling, though. K.P.K.

The most surprising thing about the viewing age stats you gave on Monday was that every show seemed to skew old. Why don't the networks do what other companies do and concentrate on their core market instead of panting after the young adults?

The networks are panting after young viewers because they watch the least TV — especially young men. And I think lots of companies in other industries are similarly panting after their next crop of customers. The newspaper industry comes to mind

My favorite part of the cheesetastic, miracle-laden "Studio 60" finale? That within six hours of having his debilitating drug addiction revealed, Chandler Bing was fully cured and working on next week's show. No Betty Ford, no Promises. Was it that easy for Aaron Sorkin? Hey, insta-rehab has worked so well for Lindsay, Nicole, Britney, etc. — why not Matt Albie, aka Chandler Bing, aka Matthew Perry?

Have you seen "Hey Paula"? If she was trying to change her image, it didn't work. Not only does she always sound like she's on something, but she also comes off as a spoiled baby with a sense of entitlement instead of as a mature, grown woman. And why am I so concerned about this?

If she sounded and acted like a "mature woman," she would not have a career on TV. As to why you are so concerned about this, I can only assume it's because you are a serious student of television.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're in the mood to lead the charge — but be sure you have a clear objective in mind. Avoid random decision-making.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone close to you may object to your penchant for criticism. Try to avoid coming across as a nag — especially in the early morning hours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Underlying tension may threaten to ruin your whole day unless you do something about it as soon as you notice that something is wrong.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Take care you're not being so possessive that you are actually offensive in your approach — especially with younger people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may find it difficult to hold your tongue when you are struck with a thought that seemed pertinent at the time — but think twice before speaking up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You needn't be critical of others; you have enough to do and focus on that you shouldn't be paying much attention to others' work anyway.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You can supply someone else's needs in abundance — but you must take care you're not sacrificing something important to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Follow the rules — or be ready and willing to face the consequences (which may be rather harsh). Adopt a quiet, peaceful demeanor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Your head for facts and figures will serve you well, and your willingness to concentrate on the smallest detail will be appreciated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Avoid jealousy at all costs. The moment you begin suspecting a loved one — or a co-worker — of going against you, trouble begins.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're in the mood for adventure. Do what you can to make sure you and others will be as safe as possible, however. Don't rush.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's a good day to make amends with someone you may have unintentionally offended. Late in the day, a chance to show off is yours.

Worry Worry Worry

- Are you worried or anxious most of the time?
- Do others tell you that you worry needlessly or worry too much?
- Are you so agitated that you can't enjoy your life?
- Are you so on edge that your health is affected?
- Do you suffer from shortness of breath, palpitations, difficulty sleeping, excessive sweating, or abdominal distress?

THE GEORGE
MEDICAL CENTER
WASHINGTON DC

If so, you may have Generalized Anxiety Disorder

If you are at least 18 years of age, you may qualify to participate in a research study in which you will receive investigational medication and study-related procedures at no cost. This study is located near the Foggy Bottom Metro station.

OUR BUS COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE

And it's painless...no needles, no hassle.

Heart Attack Prevention Package $169

(Compared to most hospitals: $1,300+)

Echocardiogram Test

A video ultrasound of the heart may detect enlargement of the heart, blood clots, valve abnormalities or tumors.

Electrocardiogram Test (EKG)

This vital test may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. The EKG provides a picture of the heart's electrical activity.

Hardening of the Arteries (ASI)

Hardened arteries cause the heart to overwork and can lead to vascular disease. This test will show the degree to which your arteries have hardened.

Stroke & Aneurysm Prevention Package $129

(Compared to most hospitals: $1,000+)

Stroke/Carotid Artery Ultrasound Test

Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries. These can often be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Test

(Four-hour fast required.) This aneurysm forms as a result of a weakness in the artery wall's lining. This may be detected with an ultrasound.

Blood Circulation Test (Arteriosclerosis)

Many adults over 55 have leg cramps due to poor circulation. An ABI test measures your extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

LIMITED TIME OFFER

All 7 Tests (Includes Osteoporosis Test)

$2,300 Value for only $229

Results are interpreted by board certified physicians. Ask us about additional bloodwork: Cholesterol, Glucose, Prostate Cancer, Thyroid, C-RP and Liver testing.
